The Independence Belge says the intention of the French Government to abandon the occupstion of Mexico, beyond what is absolutely pation of Mexico, beyond what is absolutely necessary, is more apparent than ever now. The intention is strengthened by different acts on the part of the Mexican Cabinet, and more especially by the reception of Mr. Lanier's flual mission. It is even said that at the next meeting of the French Cabinet an announcement would be made of the immediate and entire evacuation of Mexico by the French troops.

Intelligence has been received to the effect that the commander of the British warship Bulldog blew her up on the 25th ultimo at Cape Haytien. The rebel Sulnave had taken by force some Haytiens under the protection of the Ernish consul, and the commander of the Buildog asked satisfaction, but receiving no reply, he opened fire on Fort Pucklett. The fort replied, and the ship getting aground, was set on fire, abandoned, and blown up. It is reported the commander sailed for Jamaica in one of President Geffrard's boats. Officers re-port the affairs of the country unsettled.

The Colored Convention in Poughkeepsie, New York, previous to adjournment, adopted a resolution declaring that there should be a a resolution declaring that there should be a representation of colored men in the city of Washington from different sections, to be there during the session of Congress, supported by the people, whose duty it shall be to urge upon the members of Congress the importance of having the status of the colored American so fixed in the land that his color shall not be a bar to his occupying any position or to the enjoyment of all the rights that appertain to citizenship. zenship.

Governor Bradford, of Maryland, bas offered a reward of five hundred dollars for the arrest of the incendiaries who destroyed the Colored Methodst Church at Millington, Kent county. The motive was that the building was used as a day school for colored children. The Governor has also issued a proclamation appointing the day named by the President as a day of thankegiving.

The following is a copy of a despatch just sent to Governor Perry : To his Excellency B. F. Perry, Provisional Governor of South Carolina.—Your letter of the 4th instant is just now received. While much has been done in South Carolina that is conducive to peace and restoration, the President still thinks that it is impossible to anticipate events. thinks that it is impossible to anticipate events. He expects, therefore, that you swill continue to exercise the duties heretotore devolved upon you as Provisional Governor of South Carolina, until you shall be relieved by his order. He observes with regret that neither the Convention nor the State Legislature has pronounced debts and obligations contracted in the name of the State for unconstitutional and even rebellions purposes to be void. He equally regrets that the State seems to decline the Congressional amendment of the Constitution of the United States abolishing slavery. It telegraphed to you yesterday as follows: "The President directs me to write to you that an early adoption of the Congressional amendment of the Constitution of the United States abolishing slavery by the South Carolina Legislature is deemed peculiarly important, and especially desirable with reference to the general situation of the Union."

The maroons of the island have been found to be true and loyal men and have done all in their power to save life and quell the insurrection. The outrages are without parallel. The evidence found upon some of the prisoners shows the intention of the insurrectionists was to spare no white people, but to slaughter all indiscriminately. The army train, consisting of fifteen hundred and seventy five mules, two hundred and dred and seventy five mules, two hundred and fifty-eight wagons, sixty travelling forges and two ambulances, which left Washington, D. C., on the 7th of last Angust under the charge of Major H. M. Mandeville, arrived at Springfield, Ill., on the 31st of October. It was the intention of the War Department, when this train was placed en route for Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, to send it across the plains, but the project has been abandoned; and an order issued directing the sale of the mules at Springfield, and the shipment of vehicles to Fort field, and the shipment of vehicles to Fort Leavenworth for transportation service or

When the earthquake occurred at San Francisco, a lady who was engaged in washing an infant of very tenderage, ran screaming into the street. She stood on the sidewalk for some time swinging something in her hand which at first was taken for a dressed chicken by the bystanders, which began to speak for fiself in language which placed it at once in the category of a different class of animated nature. She was holding it by the foot, head downward, and had forgotten all about what she had in her hand.

[From the Boston Post.]
The hearing before the commissioners on the hours of labor was resumed at the State House last evening, it being the fourth meeting held on the subject.

Messrs, Tilden, Wright and Snelling, of the Commission, were present.

The President announced that the workers in leather and other textile fabrics would have the preference of a hearing, although others in leather and other textile labrics would have the preference of a hearing, although others we uit not be excluded.

Mir. J. B. Ham, of East Boston, a boss black-smith, who had adopted the eight hour system, said that a long experience had convinced him that the ten hour system was of more advantage to both employers and employees than a longer number of hours of labor. Under his practice there was more punctuality observed under the ten hour rule than the eleven hour rule than the eleven hour rule, and that as a general rule the hands were not as profitable as those who worked ten hours. His experience in Boston since 1600 was narrated. Previous to this time, however, he had labored for several years by the day, working thirteen hours a day, and during that time he keenly felt the disadvantage of being deprived of leisure time in which to cultivate his mental faculties; but since he had worked only eight hours a day, be had improved his spare time, and was now, consequently, stronger in both mind and body. He confidently asserted that the man who labored only eight hours a day could in the long run add as much capital to his employer's collers, a these who labored ten hours, and in his opinach if would be britter for Massachusetts if the cip the hour eystem was universally adopted, not only in point of wealth, but intelligence. Then hours better adapted a man for his work han long hours. He thought a generation of femers could work fifteen hours to more advantage than a generation of mechanics could to hours. In answer to a question of one of inthers could work fifteen hours to more ad-nature than a generation of mechanics could to hours. In answer to a question of one of the Commissioners, Mr. Ham was of the opin-ion that the reason why a large number of working men indulged in the habit of using to-bacco and ardent spirits was occasioned by physical exhaustion and overwork; that they sometimes found it necessary to do this in order to stimulate them to other necessary du-ties.

cometimes found is necessary to do this in order to stimulate them to other necessary duties.

Mr. Joseph Hosmer, of Boston, a shoemaker, said as a class of men the shoemakers did not desire an eight hour law. They all worked by the piece or hour and had reduced the business to a science. Men in Lynn, he said, worked from eight to thirteen hours. The number of hours worked by them depended upon their pecuniary circumstances and the state of the business. He thought a carpenter would do as much work in ten hours as in twelve. A man, he said, should be paid according to his ability. Dictation among shoemakers would be edious. Every man ought to be left to do se he piensed. He thought the eight-hour system was applicable to certain specific trades which, worked at regularly, had a tendency to exhaust the physical system. If workmen were encounged to save a portion of their earnings, instead of spending them for nareotics and other stimulants he thought the remedy for short hours would be arrived at. If the eight-hour law would elevate a man, he was in favor of it, but every man must preserve his own individuality and manhood—journeymen as well bosses. The eight-hour system, he said, had its advocates among those who were in its secrets and who wished to control matters by its advocates among those who were in its se-crets and who wished to control matters by what they call a moral force. Members of societies, he said, refused to work with those not associated with them and struck for higher wages, and employers chose te employ such men.

Mr. C. T. Crane, President of the State Carpenters' Association of Massachusetts, denied that this course was pursued.

In conclusion, Mr. Hosmer said to the committee, that so far as the shoemakers were concerned they desired to be at liberty to do as they pleased, to adjust the pay to the amount and character of the work performed. He did not know but what this rule might be applied to other trades. Capitalists and legislation to other trades. Capitalists and legislation often combined to effect the prices of the laboring classes.

Mr. Ira Steward, of Worcester, said the shoe-makers were the poorest paid class of mechanics in the State, and thought the reason of this was because they did not combine in the form of trade unions to protect their own interests. As an instance of this in contrast he referred to the caulkers, who receive $4 and $5 per day, and who had their trade unions, thus preventing capitalists from combining against venting capitalists from combining against labor.

D. F. Drake, of Boston, harness maker, said that the body of men he represented preferred the eight-hour system. Day workers labored ten hours, but those who worked by the piece worked more than eight hours. The best workenen received $3 a day. Those who worked the least number of hours were the most intelligent men; this was a characteristic which he could not fail to notice.

Financial.—The New York Commercial of the 16th says the stock market is assuming a more settled tone. Government securities continue very dull. It is difficult to account for the large amount now coming upon the market, except from the supposition that parties who have invested their unemployed means in these during the war, now want money for active employment. Figs.—twenties of all the issues are weak. The "conversion" bonds are quoted 99 and 50 seven-thirties are generally 5 lower; the third series are selling at 66 s. It would appear probable that this low quotation will bring forward buyers, as they are critainly a good investment at that price, but the truth is that, at present, the tendency is to take capital out of resting investments and employ it actively. Gold was steady at 146 s.

THE CHOLERA IF EUROPE.—The Russian papers announce that the cholera, which appeared two months since in the southern provinces of the empire, is advancing north: and, notwithstanding the cold weather, it has arrived at Berdytchen, in Russian Poland, a town of forty thousand souls, mostly Jews. It appears that those who have suffered most from the cholera in Paris are the chiffonniers, or rag men, and the street sweepers. On the former class it has fallen so heavily that there is some the cholera in Paris are the chiffonnices, or rag men, and the street sweepers. On the former class it has fallen so heavily that there is some intention of suppressing the trade altogether. It is said that one hundred and fifteen thousand persons fled from Paris within ten days, to avoid the epidemic; but the example of the Em-peror and Empress in visiting the hospitals where the patients are under treatment has ad-ded much to their personal popularity, and will have a healthy moral effect.
